Compulsory Primary Education:

The Andhra Pradesh Primary Education Act 1961 came into force throughout the State of Andhra Pradesh except in the scheduled areas from 10th April, 1964. The Scheme was extended to the children of the age-group 6-8 this year. The implementing authorities of the scheme are the Panchayat Samithis in the Samithi areas, the Zilla Parishads in the non-Samithi areas and the Municipalities in the Municipal areas. In order to make the scheme a success "enrolment drives" were organised all over the State for one week at the commencement of the school year. To implement the scheme during this year, the Government sanctioned the following schemes :—

- (1) Appointment of 3500 additional teachers (1750 teachers in each of the Andhra and Telangana Regions) (1400 Secondary grade and 2100 Higher Elementary Grade in the entire State.)

During the year Government sanctioned the scheme to provide Mid-day Meals to 2 lakhs of needy children in primary schools (1.50 lakhs in Telangana and 0.50 lakh in Andhra area) in Co-operation with the CARE for 200 days in the year. The scheme was implemented by the Director assisted by District Educational Officers at the District level, for receiving and distributing the food material and maintaining proper accounts. At the school level, Mid-day Meal Committees were constituted which were responsible for the successful implementation of the scheme. During the year, this scheme covered 2 lakhs children and each day each child was provided with :

1. One ounce of Milk powder.
2. One ounce of Corn-meal.
3. Half ounce of vegetable-oil.

The total cost of the CARE commodities supplied to the State was about Rs. 62,00,000. Under UNICEF programme milk was distributed to 1,52,000 children covering 119 Samithis consisting of 2,388 villages in Nellore and Rayalaseema districts. The scheme cost the Government about Rs. 2,25,000.

CHAPTER IV
BASIC EDUCATION

GENERAL—SCHOOLS—SCHOLARS—TEACHERS—EXPENDITURE—ABSTRACT.

1. GENERAL

There were four types of Basic Schools in the State.

- (i) Pre-Basic.
- (ii) Junior Basic schools with I to V Grades.
- (iii) Senior Basic schools with I to VIII Grades.
- and (iv) Post-Basic schools with IX to XI Grades.

(Note.—The Statistics relating to the post-Basic schools are included in those of High schools in the Main tables (Form A).

There was no Public Examination at the end of the VIII Grade in the Senior Basic schools. The qualifying test for promotion at the end of VIII Grade was internal. The Headmaster assisted by his staff conducted the examinations in all the subjects in the syllabus both in theory and practical. The certificate in the prescribed form granted by the Headmaster after such a test was held as valid. If the pupil got qualifying marks in English also he was eligible for admission to Class IX in any recognised Secondary school in the State.

The new integrated Elementary Education syllabus was introduced in Class I in 1959-60 and extended to Class II in 1960-61, Class III in 1961-62 and Class IV in 1962-63. It would continue to be extended to higher classes year after year, so that the new pattern will be extended to Class VII by 1965-66. When this switch over was complete, the distinction existing at present between Higher Elementary, Senior Basic and Middle School Education would disappear. During the year under report the following new training schools were opened:—

1. Government Basic Training School, Thanam, Vizianagaram.
2. Government Basic Training School, Rayadurg, Anantapur.

1. Government Basic Training School, Parvathipuram.
2. Government Basic Training School, Rayachoti.
3. Government Basic Training School, Proddatur.
4. Government Basic Training School, Chittoor.

Government of India sanctioned two Extension Service Centres for Elementary School Teachers during the year at (1) Government Basic Training School, Rayachoti, (2) Government Basic Training School, Khairatabad, Hyderabad, with the main object of helping the staff of the Training Institutions to initiate plan and organise work for the in-service training of teachers in the area in which they are located, to encourage primary schools in the surrounding areas to improve themselves through the consultative services to be provided by the staff of the training institution, to facilitate more intimate association of members of Training school staff with the purposes and activities of the training school, and to co-ordinate field studies and research designed to determine, analyse the reasons for, and improve the quality of the Primary school programme.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATIONS

1. Andhra Area.—Elementary School Teachers' Associations were organised at convenient centres so as to be within easy access to all teachers in the area. All the teachers in recognised elementary schools under Public or private managements, including teacher-managers were required, to be members of the respective associations. The Deputy Inspector of schools were the ex-officio presidents of these associations. The members elect a secretary and a treasurer from among themselves, subject to the approval of the president. The objective of these associations is to improve the professional knowledge and efficiency of the teachers. The Inspecting Officers explain the implications of the Govt. Orders, give advice and guide them in the proper implementation of the orders. They are not allowed to discuss political or other subjects not related to education. The associations are expected to meet once in a month preferably on a holiday at a convenient centre with a programme of work determined at the previous meeting or planned for the year with reference to each monthly meeting.
